The doctor thinks they have gotten the entire tumor, but recommends two weeks of radiation therapy to follow up. She loves spending time with her strange friends and drinking and doing drugs. I like Liz and how she ingratiates herself into the middle of the mystery.

On the whole, I enjoyed the story line and the various characters. It kept me guessing. The first noticeable symptom is that he has trouble finding the right word for what he wants to say. But in this suburban school nothing is as it seems, and the usually shy Liz decides to mingle with the other teachers for once in order to find out who killed Martha.

It makes for great humor as long as you keep it under control. This was actually one class, the students and I were trying to figure out how to set ourselves up for reading with a British accent. It helps us make connection between language, culture and history and how they help shape humor in society.
