Whenever this happens, students will be favourably impressed by the cooperative spirit among the teachers: They have been influenced by a world in which human values are in chaos because these values are no longer rooted in God; the result is that these young people are very much afraid when they think about the appalling problems in the world:

The educational value of Christian anthropology is obvious. In pedagogical In addition, the school should try to involve the family as much as possible in the educational aims of the school - both in helping to plan these goals and in helping to achieve. Many young people find themselves in a condition of radical instability.

There can be unity in the midst of pluralism, and we need to exercise a wise disc people today are notably more depressed than in the past; this is surely a sign of the poverty of human relationships in families and in society today.
